Artist Statement - A detailed story about the work for viewer's understanding.

The grey great curtain of the world turns to silver glass when one goes deep enough.
Blue were the days we didn't know and didn't understand.
Bright is our future now.
So, dig and journey to the unknown waiting to befriend.
And shed sheer light, thank you oh dear Cobalt, friend of sea & stars, earth & space.

This work is part of an ongoing project that involves a visual interpretation of the Periodic Table of Elements through paintings, drawings and gouaches. As an artist and teacher, Science has always been an influence on my work and therefore, I am in constant consideration of the relationship of art and science - two disciplines that share much in terms of thought process, discovery and invention.

The purpose of this project is to bring a keen realization and connection to the "Elements of the Periodic Table" which make up the entirety of the physical world. All of the elements share a remarkable origin in that they are the consequences of the birth and death of stars. Everything on Earth is made up of these elements, including us, and it is truly astounding to realize that we are, in fact, "the stuff of stars". Intrinsic to this, is the importance and significance of the elements to our lives and that it is incumbent upon us to consider these resources carefully and utilize them responsibly.

My intention is to interpret 60 elements, which is approximately the number of elements known at the time that Mendeleyev created the table.

I plan to divide the project up into three parts, each part comprising of 20 elements; each element represented by a painting, drawing, and gouache, which would constitute 60 works in all. The entire project will consist of 180 works.

When complete, it is my intention to have it acquired by a museum or institution where it can be presented in it's entirety.
