Artist Statement - A detailed story about the work for viewer's understanding.

The ancient Egyptians believed that when a person died, they would need all internal organs in their afterlife. The heads of the four sons of Horus were described as their Canopic jar animals, each protected by their mothers. Imsety with the human face stored the liver and protected by mother goddess Isis. Duamutef with jackal face stored the stomach and protects by mother goddess Neith. Hapi with the baboon face stored the lungs and was protected by mother goddess Nephthys. Qebehsenuf with hawk face stored the intestines and was protected by mother goddess Serket.
